outh's leading imperialists. Senator John Tyler Morgan of Alabama, sub-the Philippines for Africa as an ideal destination for American blacks, reasoning was closer to moderate thinking. He accepted black capacity res with careful tutelage, but he feared that the educational and voca-ccesses of Negroes would escalate the hostility and demands for a caste n the part of less successful whites. Therefore, Morgan saw emigration ly hope for American blacks. In contrast, the anti-imperialist publisher ouisville Courier-Journal, General A. C. Greenwood, wanted to kill
 ; with one stone by shipping the blacks to the Philippines before grant-: islands independence. In essence, many anti-imperialists resembled iglanders"—to whom Roosevelt compared them—who opposed Britrialism more out of fear that it would inundate their island with alien n out of any humanitarian concern for the colonized.⁴⁶
